

Flood Damage Jeopardises Sealing the Strez

I have received a number of reports regarding the durability of the sealing works being undertaken on the Strzelecki Track and so in early May took a couple of days to drive its length.

In summary about half (230km) has been completed and about half is in fair to good condition, about a quarter is showing signs of failure and the last quarter is in serious state of disrepair.

I worked to secure $189m from the former Liberal

Government for the project which has also received $35m from the state. The project was funded on the basis of a SA Dept of Transport assessment that this would be sufficient for the project.

The proposal utilises a new sealing method (tried on the Lyndhurst to Marree Road) which uses adjacent material to build the base and then lays a waterproof membrane. This is then sprayed with bitumen and topped with a standard bitumen roadstone.

I had been supportive of the method on the basis it is much cheaper than a "standard" two coat bitumen road and given the challenges of securing sufficient funding to seal the Strez, worth a go.

However, from what I observed, with the road half complete we are in danger of "throwing good money after bad". I am no expert, but it seems that once the membrane is ruptured by either flood, wear or subsidence, it requires complete replacement, not repair.

Following floods on the northern end of the Strez, extensive repair/replacement is occurring, and no new works are currently underway. I have written to SA Transport Minister Tom Koutsantonis with a detailed report on the state of various sections and urged him to do as I have urged, and that is to drive the length of the track and if he is as concerned as me, instigate a solution.

Anangu Pitjantjatjara Yankunytjatjara Lands Turns 40

I was pleased to join communities on the APY Lands to celebrate forty years since the Tonkin Liberal Government granted freehold title to the 10% of the state which is now the Anangu Pitjantjatjara and Yankunytjatjara Lands.

I visit the Lands a couple of times a year, and over time have made friends, developed trust and worked for better outcomes for these and other remote communities, delivering investment in roads, art centres, health services, water and electricity, mobile phones and reforms to work and welfare programs.

Physical assets have improved. Medical centres, dialysis services, school campuses, housing, shops and policing have all had significant investment, but actual outcomes in education, health, domestic violence, personal safety and private employment have not.

It was Punch Thompson OAM, who sadly passed away in 2013, the signatory on the APY Lands agreement who said to me, "It hasn't worked out how we thought."

The APY project has soaked up hundreds of millions of taxpayers' dollars, but to condemn the expense would be an error. The error is not that we seek to bridge the gap, it is that our efforts are failing. While most NGOs and government workers on the Lands believe in the value and success of their work, it is fair to ask: If they are all doing such a great job, why aren't things getting better? When I do, it is a question normally met by a puzzled shrug.

Relieving an individual of personal responsibility risks it becoming a permanent transfer. Make no mistake, absolving personal responsibility occurs everywhere and not just in remote indigenous communities and normally has the same outcome.

A simple, well-intentioned, example are school breakfast programs, instigated because kids are coming to school hungry. We recognise and applaud the intention and celebrate the immediate results, but what happens in the longer term, what happens in school holidays? Will the parent ever again take responsibility or has the agency concerned become the permanent custodian of that responsibility. It's a conundrum!

It questions the value of a strategy attempting to maintain a remote population, speaking English as a second language, on a land title not allowing for an individual to build and own a house and with no real local economy.

This is the case of the APY Lands where the outcome is an economy totally dependent on the taxpayer either through welfare, work for the dole like programs or indigenous jobs funded by government.

Eventually, government is responsible for everything, with little reward for personal initiative. Culture is ever changing and while we need to preserve, appreciate and learn from the past we need also to move with the times and modernise. In our interactive online world, where opportunities and services are located on electronic platforms, poor English disempowers and delivers dependency on others. Fundamental reforms requiring the individual to strive for their own success are essential. Success delivers the freedom to take charge of your own life, outcomes undermined by policies encouraging dependency.

Donald Fraser (at left) from Kenmore Park is one of the few surviving original campaigners for the APY Land Rights Act. Rowan has come to know him well through the years.

There were lots of dancers and musicians at the celebrations in Umawa - the men and boys entertained the crowd with a traditional dance. Rowan enjoyed catching up with Trevor Adamson, bottom left, APY Councillor from Pukatja and at right, George Witjiti a community leader and artist from Kaltjiti (Fregon) - Rowan learned he had recently moved into the aged care facility at Ernabella.

Adelaide Plains

Grey hosts a vibrant horticulture industry north of the Gawler River on the Adelaide Plains. Rowan attended the Premiers' Horticultural Awards where industry legend Joe Giangregorio received his Lifetime Achievement award. Weil into his 80's, Joe still turns up for work every day.

Craddock

Heading south after Hawker Racing Club race event, Rowan called into the historic and very popular Craddock pub and caught up with new owner Dave Wallace and a group from the Goodwood Cricket Club on their end of year trip. He is pictured with cricket club President Warwick Potts and Secretary Adrian Nippess.

Port Lincoln

The Mortlock Carnival on the King's Birthday Weekend is 79 years old and was another fantastic exhibition of Aussie Rules. A good place for Rowan to get the good oil on what's going on across the western half of the electorate. He is with Grey (Golly) Marshall from Whyalla whose son Jesse played in the Eastern Eyre team.

Port Pirie

A big crowd turned up to listen to (and meet) State Governor Frances Adamson AC at Port Pirie's Soroptimist's International Women's Day Luncheon. Rowan first met Frances on delegation when she was our Ambassador to Beijing. The Governor gave an excellent speech on breaking the barriers and her pathway to the top.

Hawker Cup

The races are always a big weekend in Hawker. A big crowd turned out for race day in perfect weather and a time when past and present members of the "outback" community come together to catch up. Photo is of Jamcra just putting his nose in front at the finish line in the Hawker Cup.

Moonta

Parkview Aged Care Committee has worked hard to secure $3.3m in grants from the Federal Capital Assistance Program. The money will enable renovation and expansion of its Memory Support services, upgrade dining rooms, build nine new rooms and six one-bedroom units for staff. Rowan congratulates Chairman John Hodgetts and GM Michael Powell.

Innamincka

Rowan caught up with Ali Matthews and her partner Chris Warren at the Cooper Creek Homestay. Turns out Chris used to work on road gangs, so they had a good discussion on the quality of the work on the Strez. Rowan is pictured having a chat with Ali.

Warooka

There is nothing easy about running a business or employing people, so twenty years doing just that is a fair achievement. Rowan was pleased to join Aitchison Plumbing Services owners Mark and Julie Aitchison celebrating the big day in April. A big crowd, locals and industry contacts and some very colourful speeches rounded out the day.

Mount Laura Lions Club

Whyalla hosts two Lions clubs and the younger, Mount Laura, turns fifty this year. Rowan was delighted to attend the changeover dinner at Whyalla recently. Enjoying the celebrations are Pauline Oates, Sue Schrapel and Chernie Lowe.

Murnpeowie Station

The drive up the Strez was an opportunity to check firsthand on the challenges facing the cattle industry. Rowan was delighted Joy and Bully Booth were home when he called in and the next day managed to join Gerard and Karina Sheehan on the back veranda on Moolawatana.

Port Lincoln Men's Shed

Port Lincoln Men's Shed is going from strength to strength and Rowan was delighted to drop in, have a look around and present them with a new Australian flag. He is with team leader Bill Broughton and left to right - Reverend Nathan Whittas, John Kroezen, Allan Dixon, Ron Campbell, Colin Webb and Allan Smith.

Clare, Northern & Yorke Regional Forum

Rowan attended the Clare, Northern and Yorke Regional Forum during April. There are a million issues challenging local governments and regional economies at the moment and the forum was a showcase for ideas on how to address them. Rowan caught up with Wakefield Regional Council Mayor Rodney Reid during one of the session changeovers.

Port Augusta

State Opposition Leader David Spiers is a very regular visitor to Grey and after starting in Melbourne Rowan had the opportunity to spend some time with him in Port Augusta during May where they met with Mayor Linley Shine and discussed a number of challenging issues including the cost of living pressures, the crime rate, housing and the city wharf.

Port Pirie

Port Pirie's annual Tarpani Wellbeing Day was well attended. Lots of stalls, information, entertainment and activities were available. Rowan took time to attend and really enjoyed meeting St John Youth Members Kataja Arthur, Sophie Luland-Biddell and Marcus Sturm. Hopefully they will eventually become ambulance officers. It is hard to think of a more important service.

The Pathway to Net Zero

In Australia we are told renewables are the cheapest form of electricity and here in South Australia (apart from Tassie hydro) we lead the nation with 71.5% renewables. Next best is Victoria at 36.8%. We are leading the charge, but we also have the highest average retail prices, 45.3c/kWh. Next highest is NSW with 33.84c/kWh (source: Canstar Blue). For the record, Victoria is 30.42c/kWh. So, if renewables are the cheapest, and we have the most, why are our retail prices the highest?

There are two main reasons. First is the intermittent nature of wind and solar and the need for an alternative dispatchable source capable of powering the whole network at any time. The second is renewable subsidies, invisible to the wholesale market but embedded in the retail market. It is 8.10pm, May 27th as I write this. Currently SA is consuming just over 1800MW of electricity. However, just 56MW or 3% of this requirement is coming from our 2742MW of installed renewable capacity, the batteries are flat and contributing just 5MW. Gas or coal are supplying the other 97%, either generated here or coming from Victoria and this situation is common during Autumn. When renewables begin their penetration of the market it is an easy fit, because full back-up is available from existing generators. However, as renewables gain market share, they are able to undercut base-load generators (with the aid of subsidies), investment stalls, equipment wears out and eventually baseload generators withdraw from the market. So, while baseload generators are unprofitable and there are less days when we need them, in times of low renewable generation they are absolutely essential. Until the day renewables can supply 24/7, 365 days of the year, a full back-up system is required. Consequently, when renewables are in short supply, dispatchable generation (coal and gas) goes through the roof - the more you need it, the more you pay, so here in SA where we need it the most, we pay the most. The other price driver is the hidden consumer subsidies. The electricity market is a labyrinth of hidden handouts where renewable generators can make a profit selling their electricity for minus $50MW on the back of the hidden consumer subsidies embedded in our retail accounts. Given the political climate, investment in new coal or gas is highly unlikely and we need to explore all options. That is why Peter Dutton has put the nuclear option on the table, an emission free dispatchable technology, as part of our mix. Sit tight for the coming scare campaign, which will assume Australians are idiots and will feed us garbage. We harness dangerous materials of all kinds every day, safely, because we understand their properties and how to handle them.

France produces 70% of their electricity from nuclear and is the world's largest exporter of electricity because of its low production costs. They have power plants right next to towns and agriculture and receive no more radiation than you or I and their children don't have two heads. It is a mature industry with almost every one of the largest economies world-wide using it and building new reactors. Surely, they can't all be wrong.

Under Labor, Australians are going backwards

- Electricity prices have gone up
- Gas prices have gone up
- Mortgages have gone up
- Rents have gone up
- Taxes have gone up
- Immigration has gone up
- Cost of living through the roof

Time to Move On

Most of you will have heard I will not be re-contesting the next election. It has not been an easy decision as I still have unwavering enthusiasm for the job however, I am aware my "piece of string" has a definite if undetermined length and consequently, with my wife Teresa, who has been such an important support, we have decided it is time to tackle the next chapter of our lives. While I recognise success has many parents, I am nonetheless proud of a number of achievements during my tenure including the unprecedented investment in our road network delivering the Port Wakefield overpass, the second bridge at Port Augusta, dual lanes for the Augusta Highway, and extensive upgrades to multiple highways including the Horrocks, Barrier, Eyre, Tod, Birdseye and Lincoln. I was fortunate to secure support to renew the Dog Fence, to see my committee's recommendations for Country of Origin Labelling of food implemented and secure four new Headspace units. I fought successfully for the Cashless Debit Card in Ceduna which changed and saved lives and for the National Radioactive Waste Management Facility, which much to my disgust, were both abandoned by the current government.

Other wins include the doubling of Farm Management Deposits, airstrip upgrades, uni-hubs, $55m plus on Stronger Regions Programs, 57 new mobile phone towers and securing Constant Glucose Monitors for T1 diabetics. Ensuring the diversity, obstacles and opportunities of a vast seat like Grey are taken to the Federal Parliament is a challenge of the first order. There are never enough hours, days or weeks, but I have done my utmost to visit all communities regularly, including the most remote, to talk to constituents and develop relationships with leaders to ensure I know what is going on in their patch. I will miss the intensity and mental challenge of the job, but it is time.

The Liberal Party is currently running a process to select a candidate to contest Grey at the next election. There is a strong field, and members of the Liberal Party living in Grey have the responsibility of choosing their preferred candidate. I am looking forward to that outcome and assisting in introducing our new candidate to the electorate which I am hopeful will continue to recognise the understanding the Liberal Party has of our regions and the value we place on them.

Rowan delivered his First Speech in the House of Representatives on February 20, 2008.

Trinity College Roseworthy

Trinity College Roseworthy has expanded to yet another campus with a magnificent facility in the new housing development at Roseworthy. Principal Nick Hatley is responsible for all of their northern campuses and is pictured addressing the crowd.

Following the 2019 Southern YP fire, the Edithburgh Sports and Community Club applied for a Black Summer Bushfire Recovery Grant to build infrastructure at the oval to use for emergency management, but doubling as changeroom/toilets including female facilities and oval lighting. Rowan assisted in the opening with Kay Barlow and club President Terry Austin.

Port Lincoln

Rowan enjoyed seeing some great talent perform at the 2024 Invitational Gymnastics Championships in Port Lincoln in June. He is with coach Annie Jantke and City of Port Lincoln Mayor Diana Mislov and Level 1 Gymnasts Lily Francis, Phoebe Cuddeford, Opal Coleman, Lilly O'Neill, Willa Pedler, Satsuki Ames, London Dorward, Lucy Chambers, Sutton Wait, Aisha Polkinghorne, Heidi Schreiber, Indigo Baldissera, Taylor Cotton and Ocea Mallard.

Coober Pedy

Rowan was delighted to open the 35th annual Coober Pedy Opal Festival in June on the town oval. The crowd enjoyed some high quality live music and great stalls. Rowan visited traders, caught up with locals, then watched the wonderful street parade. In his address he praised the community's individualism and can-do attitude, singling out the Coober Pedy Retail, Business and Tourism Association and President George Kountouris' leadership for its efforts securing the sponsorship to stage the event and the long hours in bringing it all together. Rowan is pictured with George Cooley who did the Welcome to Country and George Kountouris.

Live Sheep Export Ban

Western Australian farmers have had enough and are pushing back against governments seemingly determined to force them out of the industry. On the last day of May hundreds of trucks and representatives from all aspects of the industry protesting Labor's decision to shut down the live sheep export industry invaded Perth CBD and launched the Keep the Sheep petition. The farmers declared they will now be activists and not just optimists and will campaign for change at the next election.

The proposed ban was why I led a Coalition delegation to South Australia then Western Australia during April where hundreds from the industry turned up, bewildered, angry and ready for a scrap. Whether it is indiscriminate water buy-backs, shutting fisheries, bio-security levies, killing off support for farmers facing Native Title Claims or live exports, Australian agriculture is under attack from the Left. Confirmation comes from the Animal Justice Party that it did a preference deal with the Albanese Government at the last election to phase out the industry and is now negotiating to do the same to cattle. Enormous reforms have been undertaken by the industry, millions of dollars invested, delivering first-class conditions on board with negligible stock losses.

Activists continually use old footage to attack an industry that has undertaken massive reforms. Up to date information is available on the LiveStock Collective website where you can see the first-class conditions our sheep enjoy – have a look and share it with friends. Australian regulations improve shipping standards around the world and if we exit, the trade will just source sheep from other willing suppliers who care little how the livestock is handled. This campaign can be the start of something much bigger and I am strongly urging people to get on board, and sign the petition on the Keep the Sheep website and join the 50,000 people who have already backed our farmers. Without farmers we would be hungry, naked and sober!!

Budget Ignores Regional Australia

The Federal Government's persistence in selling its budget for just three days and instead then switched to attacking Peter Dutton for his response, tells us all we need to know about the budget. It simply does not do enough to address the real problems facing Australians, the spiralling cost of food, electricity, gas, insurance, council rates, health, education, interest payments and importantly, chronic housing shortages. Peter Dutton targeted Labor for importing 548,000 extra people last year at a time when the ABS says housing construction this year will be just 95,400. Peter has committed to significantly reducing our permanent migration numbers.

Apart from extending two existing schemes supporting local airports, the budget ignores regional Australia, reducing support while increasing obstacles, costs and foisting the burdens of others upon them. Especially disappointing is the mobile blackspot program has not been funded beyond 2026. Just two major SA road projects- the South-Eastern Freeway and South Road, set to cost $15bn for 10.5km or an unbelievable $1,500 million per kilometre, with nothing for dual lanes north of Lochiel on the Augusta Highway. Finally, after a two-year hiatus, three projects in Grey won grants from the new Growing Regions Program (replacing the BBRF) and I welcome that, but we have missed an entire year and programs like Local Roads and Community Infrastructure, Building Better Regions and Stronger Communities, Regional Airport Screening and Commonwealth Regional Scholarship Program are winding up. Recognition of enrolled nurses in aged care, following last year's stipulation requiring a registered nurse on duty 24/7 is positive news, if long overdue. Ten percent care hours to enrolled nurses will help, but I suspect only at the margins. The budget centrepiece is the $300 electricity rebate but coming after a 26% increase in our SA retail prices it barely makes a dent. The rebate neatly picks your tax pocket and then hands a small portion back. Either way you pay. For the many communities that form the childcare voids in regional Australia, disappointingly there is nothing at all. We will continue the fight. For agriculture it's more pain, a live sheep ban, bio-security levies, starving our roads of investment, pretending proceeds from the Coalition's Future Drought Fund is new spending and ploughing ahead with vehicle emissions standards which will redistribute wealth from the country to the city. The Government is throwing another $4m at the Kimba National Radioactive Waste Management site on remediation following the $108m already spent and unbelievably allocates $38m from the Australian Radioactive Waste Authorities' budget for them to look for a new site – it's a shemuzzle!

While the Treasurer trumpets the $25bn tax-cuts, budgeted and provided for by the former government, it returns less than half of the $60bn bracket creep from the last three years. The Government has a surplus this year but plunges back into deficit through the next period on the back of rapidly rising spending which they have cemented into forward estimates, including the NDIS which is predicted to hit an eye watering $61bn a year by 2027. Largely ignored, there is little joy for the regions in this budget despite our contribution to the nation. In a graphic display of priorities, while Jim Chalmers and Labor target us for savings, he finds the money for an extra 36,000 bureaucrats in Canberra.

Vehicle Emissions Tax

Surprisingly, the industry has not released estimates of the impact of the new tax on prices and one can only speculate as to why this would be the case. However, I have referred to the industry's earlier estimates and reduced them by the applicable fraction, calculating a Ford Ranger will incur $15k tax penalty. Appallingly, the tax generated on the sales will be used to buy credits from importers of electric vehicles like Tesla, BYD and GAC Aion and used to subsidise the prices of their vehicles, almost all of which are sold to city dwellers. This is a blatant selective transfer of wealth from the country to the city. However, EV incentives do not stop there. Conventional vehicles incur a 5% import duty. EV's with a value less than $90k do not. Additionally, EV's, not using petrol or diesel avoid paying fuel excise, currently 49.6c/Lt, which in turn generates $15.7bn in taxes annually. With EV's now capturing 6.5% of the national market it is well past time the Government imposed a road user charge to ensure they pay their fair share, but at this stage it is yet another subsidy for electric cars. As an added complication, as we attempt to save the planet, two thirds of electric vehicles world-wide and 79% of lithium/iron batteries are sourced from China which is building evermore coal-fired power stations to drive its economy. Chinese coal consumption has risen by 15% since 2020 to more than 4bn tonne pa. In summary, if our government is determined to subsidise EV's, the penalty should be imposed equally on all car owners, not selectively on those of us who bear the oft quoted tyranny of distance, borne by regional Australians.

Peter Dutton Sets Down an Agenda

Many search for reasons to vote for one party or another and ask "what is the difference?" Peter Dutton is a conviction politician and while we may be still almost twelve months away from an election, he has already marked some clear differences in the way a Coalition Government would run Australia. A Peter Dutton led Coalition Government will seek to:

- Increase the instant tax write-off provisions from $20,000 to $30,000
- Reduce our permanent migration rate
- Implement a two-year ban on foreign investors buying existing homes
- Bring back the Cashless Debit Card for communities that want it
- Include nuclear energy as an option for our energy mix
- Abolish Labor's taxes on unrealised capital gains in super accounts
- Oppose UN membership status for Hamas
- Repeat the laws prohibiting bosses from contacting workers out of hours

• Support the continuation of the live sheep trade

- Reprioritise funding for Labor's 36,000 new public bureaucrats to Defence
- Provide $400m leave and training incentives for doctors training as GPs
- Increase free Medicare psychology sessions from ten to twenty
- Enable first home-owners to access their superannuation to secure their deposit
- Increase the amount pensioners can earn before affecting their payments

Peter Dutton has a strong belief in individual freedom and giving Australians the opportunity to succeed on their terms. He was formerly a policeman who has seen the best and the worst of people and is appalled by domestic violence and committed to protecting all Australians. Further policies will be rolled out as the election nears, but we can be assured Peter will tell us how the Coalition will tackle the plethora of challenges facing Australia.

Clontarf Foundation - an Opportunity to Succeed

The Clontarf Foundation exists to improve the education, discipline, life skills, self-esteem and employment prospects of young Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander men and by doing so equips them to participate more meaningfully in society. Clontarf uses sport as a tool to provide life skills and engage participants in education. From scratch in 2000 it now services 11,500 boys in 148 academies across Australia. Here in Grey, Clontarf operates in Ceduna, Coober Pedy, Port Pirie, Whyalla and Port Augusta where during May, a football carnival was held for all SA Academies. Rowan is pictured with the Port Augusta team. The boys were confident, polite, engaging and a credit to Clontarf.

ANZAC Day Services on Eyre Peninsula

Rowan attended the ANZAC Dawn Service in Tumbly Bay and later the march in Port Lincoln. He captured the big Tumbly crowd drenched in sunshine just on dawn before the sun rose and sat behind a blanket of cloud for the rest of the day. ANZAC crowds continue to grow as people come together to give thanks for the sacrifice that has built our wonderful country.

Yunta Gymkhana and Motokhana

This enthusiastic Yunta community deserves the praise it gets for its annual Gymkhana and Motokhana event. If you haven't been, put it on your calendar for next year! Their fabulous clubrooms alone are worth the effort and a testament to the can-do attitude of the community. Rowan is with locals Ros, Lindsay and Grant Breeding.

Whyalla Lions Club Turns 60

The Whyalla Lions Club turned sixty recently and Rowan joined the club for the celebrations. Long-time member Meg Hill was overwhelmed when presented with a James D Richardson Award for her long and dedicated service by District Vice Governor Steve Fawcett. James Richardson was an Australian Lions pioneer and the first to serve as a Director on the Lions International Board. As a Life Member of APEX, Rowan recognises the incredible value service clubs deliver. They capture the essence of community by prioritising the needs of others and always providing a place for making long-term friendships outside of an individual's normal orbit and a friendly point of contact as we travel around this vast country of ours.

State ICPA Conference in Quorn

The Marla/Oodnadatta branch hosted the State Isolated Children's Parents' Association Conference in Quorn in March. A good education for station kids comes at an enormous cost and deter workers from relocating to remote properties.

The School of the Air cancellation of Year 7, with their restructure into secondary, loads another boarding school year with associated costs onto parents. Rowan is with Belinda Hatcher, Julia Broad, Anna McCorkle and front Jill Greenfield, Shona Amos and Joanna Gibson.

Samaritan College Whyalla

Samaritan College must be doing something right as the facility continues to grow and expand with bigger and better facilities. Rowan joined the school community for the opening of its new wing at the St John's campus and is pictured with Director of Catholic Education Port Pirie Diocese, Nichii Mardon, Mayor Phil Stone and Principal Damien Judd.

New Electorate Office in Port Pirie

Sadly Rowan's Port Pirie team was driven out of the old heritage-listed office on Ellen Street by the feral pigeons which had blocked gutters and caused repeated office flooding. After a temporary relocation, work on newly renovated premises on Florence Street were completed and were officially opened in early April. Drop in for a look!
